"My neighbor on the next street had a telephone installed. Why did he get one before me?"

That is a natural question.
There are a number of reasons, one or several of which may fit the case.
It's possible your neighbor on the next street ordered service sooner than you did... has been longer on the waiting list.
Or the neighbor who applied later but got service sooner may be one whose responsibilities for defense, public health, welfare and safety require it.
Or there may be more wire capacity available on his street.
Until the telephone factories are able to turn from war production, there will continue to be shortages of certain facilities here on the home front.
We are doing our level best to meet the essential requirements of our country and community, and to be fair to everyone.
Your co-operation and understanding are appreciated.
